

About SullivanMunce...

SullivanMunce Cultural Center, nestled in the village of Zionsville, is a unique community resource comprised of a collecting history museum, genealogy library, and an art center, whose mission is to enrich our community through the preservation, education, and appreciation of history and the arts. Since 1973, we have engaged visitors locally, nationally, and internationally in the culture of this region.

Patrick Henry Sullivan Museum

The Patrick Henry Sullivan Museum houses community archives and exhibition galleries that showcase permanent, temporary and traveling exhibits. The Museum is an important repository of the heritage of Zionsville, Boone County, and the State of Indiana; it safeguards and protects the important cultural ephemera of the citizens, businesses, organizations, and clubs of this area.

Munce Art Center

The Mary Elizabeth Munce Art Center exhibits and sells works of art from the local and regional community by holding numerous professional and community art exhibitions each year. The art center offers art instruction for students of all ages, summer camps for children 7 - 17, and workshops for professional artists.

Zionsville Genealogy Library

The Zionsville Genealogy Library is one of the largest private genealogy collections in the region with more than 4,000 volumes. The Library is an inviting place where one can spend an hour or a day reading and researching information from our unique holdings and online databases.
